Theo is five years old now. Even though he's in Kindergarten, he's still our little introvert. The favorite part of the party for him is when everyone leaves, then he can go play by himself again. He does, however, enjoy his brother and sisters. He's learning to be a great baby sitter. He can entertain Therese better than anyone except Drew.

I'm becoming more and more impressed with his ability to make cool stuff with Lego toys. He has a great imagination and does some things that I wouldn't have thought of. He may be the engineer of the family.

Theo has his father's scrawny build. And because of that he has a peculiar run. It's kind of a skipping run with one hand holding up his pants. His pants are always falling down. If we get pants that fit his legs, they're too big. If we get pants that fit his waiste, they're too short. Poor kid. He's a cutie, though so we'll keep him.
